

First Light

(for Rebecca)

I don't know what

floated through our room moments before

purple hung

on silhouettes
of spruce

outside our window

I'd like to believe it was a bird poets

had somehow missed

with wing beats softer than

fawn breath

with a call the colors

of yellow

Aaron M. Moe
Spring 2010